■ Two dark-suited IRS agents showed up at a California car wash, hand-delivering the owner an unpaid tax bill of 4 cents. Aaron Zeff, of Harv's Metro Car Wash in Sacramento, says the agents were "deadly serious" about the $0.04 bill from 2006, which had accrued $202.31 in late fees and taxes. "It's hilarious," said Zeff, who paid the bill. "I think (the IRS) may have a problem with priorities."

■ Modest dog owners are buying a product called Rear Gear—a decorative cover for a pet's unsightly anus. Retailing for $5 under the slogan "No more Mr. Brown Eye," the Rear Gear dangles from the base of a dog's tail, obscuring the anus, and is available in a variety of designs, including a flower, a heart, and a sheriff's badge.
